

It was a good day. I enjoyed the extra hour of sleep this morning. I got up and had a good quiet time with the Lord. I got dressed and headed over to church. Worship was sweet this morning. So sweet in fact that I got caught up on one of the songs and forgot to flip to the next verse of the song :-D. Scott Hahn brought the Word today about the faith of the leper and the actions of Jesus. It was very good and it challenged us all to spend time with the Lord listening and speaking. We had communion today and a good time with dedicating baby Hayes.

After church, I did some grocery shopping. I got home and put them up and relaxed. This afternoon I flipped between football (not a good day for Carolina, Seattle or the Colts) and Food Network. I talked with Mom this afternoon. Grandmother is still in the hospital but not as bad as she was in June. Please pray for her breathing and heart issues. I watched Extreme Makeover Home Edition and a little of The Hunt For Red October tonight.
