

It was a challenging morning at work. The state is having issues with the info system. So people were getting kicked out or frustrated because of slowness. I'm thankful it sped up a little in the afternoon so I could work on grades. I helped with our last interview for an open slot at our school. Then Mrs. Glover and I recommended one of the candidates to the district.

My sinuses have been draining today and it upset my stomach. I had some soup and a grilled cheese and stayed home tonight. I hated missing home group, but I think it was the best decision. I'm not feeling too bad but it is a little annoying. I'm headed to bed for a little extra rest.

Share this:

- Share