

It was busy this morning. Out of 4 copiers only one is working and that one had issues this morning. I was able to get it up and running. We were also having issues with the fire alarm system, but it was fixed quickly. I worked on honor rolls and a couple of other reports this afternoon. Marg called me up and told me about the Porter's house burning down. I was blown away. I let the believers at work know so we could be in prayer and be there to support them. I know between house church, Antioch, and Arts Alive they will have help but it is still a big blow. I so grateful that all of them are OK.

This evening I watched a movie and then I watched show on the History Channel called "Cities of The Underworld." Tonight was the first new episode of the season. They look at history and background of cities by looking at the tunnels and history below the surface. Tonight's episode was on Israel. It was very good.
