

It was a busy day at school. We had one student that was in a prime mood today. I don't know how we can get that kid on the right track. I did get to talk with one of the teachers today about his family. He is a believer and his mom & dad are both going through some real health issues. It was good to let him know we have been praying for them and to get an update. Work wise it was productive. I'm still playing catch up on my job, but praise the Lord progress is being made.

Tonight I talked via Facebook with Rob about tickets to the Nationals game we are going to this summer. I'm so looking forward to the vacation to visit Rob & his family. It will be a fun time away in the middle of all the scheduling happening at work.

p.s. I love Darin Leong's music. It is all acoustic and instrumental. You can check him out at <http://www.hawaiiguitar.com> or buy his stuff from iTunes by clicking here.

Share this:

- Share