

It was a nice day. I slept in until 9. I got up and had breakfast and quiet time. I headed over to West End Cinemas a little early. I'm glad I did. I got to see the 12:35 showing of Indy IV but my friends had to go to the 1pm show. It ruined it for me in line when the guy in front of me remarked about the movie and gave away one of the secrets.

It thought it was a OK Indy movie ranking above Temple of Doom but below Raiders & Last Crusade. I know it was supposed to be a homage to the B sci fi movies of the 50's but it was a little too corny for me in some parts. Over all I felt it was rushed. It could have been a half hour longer and been OK. I felt the relationship aspect of the movie is what suffered most from the rushed nature.

I spent the evening at the Paramount for day one of tech week one. Tonight we did the first run through of the ballet "Blessings At The Well." It went well. (Here is a story about it from our local paper.) It will be Saturday night at 7 and Sunday at 3. Come out and see it. (Click here for ticket info).

Share this:

- Share